2	Aims of the module and acquired skills Students learn to work with primary sources related to a period of Central and Eastern European History. They develop a critical approach towards the sources and to evaluate the results of historical scholarship in the light of primary sources. They acquire scholarly approaches particular to a certain period, they learn to apply the methods specific for the period and become familiar with the standard reference works. They learn to present their results in discussions, in the form of a brief presentation. They are given the opportunity to apply the skills that they have gained in the module “Historical Auxiliary Sciences” under the supervision of a specialist.
3	Contents of the module The module contains one lecture and one seminar which refer to one of three periods (Middle Ages, Early Modern History or Modern History) and one of two areas (Eastern Europe or Eastern Central Europe). Students become familiar with the state of research and scholarly discussions relating to a chosen period, actively engage into discussions and formulate their own position. Students reflect on the dependence of scholarly positions upon ideological and geographical conditions. They learn to evaluate the interaction of social, cultural, economic and political phenomena.
